Conversat Calls Large Crowd to Strathcona Hall

Loquacity At Premium As Freshmen And Freshettes Foregather

SHYNESS ABSENT

First Year Women Lose Pose Of Boredom And Sophistication

The value of expert conversation was fully demonstrated at Strathcona Hall last night when hosts of freshment, freshettes, upperclassmen, and even graduates, gathered at the annual Conversat sponsored by the S.C.A. Over six hundred eager conversationalists covered all the available floor-space, as well as chesterfields, arm-chairs, and staircases.

Talkativeness was at a premium, with the market soaring to a new high mark, while the close failed to find a solitary young lady on the floor. Among the stocks which touched peaks were ice-cream, comfortable chairs, and feminine pulcritude.

There was no shyness on the part of either men or women, and it was borne to the minds of those present that the timid violent type of co-ed. has given way to the new, self-confident, and even self-assertive kind of college girl.

Freshettes Forward

The first year women made a brave array in the role of sophisticated, blase, bored, and world-weary, young women, but a few glasses of punch, or, it may have been the magnetic personalities of the male partners, revealed them in their true character, as happy, alive, interested, and life-enjoying university students.

The fact that there were a few more men than ladies present did not dim the brilliance of the evening's affair, but only served to add interest to the gathering. Many were the sarcastic retorts which repulsed those who would cut-in, and which evoked much applause from the objects of attraction.

Refreshments Served

The high-light of the evening came, as usual with the serving of supper. Many gallant feats of food-consumption, were performed by swains who were desirous of showing their prowess before the maidens.

Chancellor Celebrates Fifty-Third Birthday

Entered C.P.R. 1901 And Became President 1918

Educated in Ontario—King's Counsel For Dominion Of Canada.

On behalf of the student body of McGill University the "Daily" extends sincere congratulations to her Chancellor, Mr. E. W. Beatty, who celebrates his fifty-third birthday today.

Mr. Edward Wentworth Beatty, Chancellor of McGill University was born October 6, 1877, at Thorold, Ont. The students of the university will recall the generosity of their chancellor who distributed the published speeches of Lord Birkenhead on "Loose Thinking" and that of Ramsay MacDonald on the occasion of his visit to Canada last year, of financial interest in university circles Mr. Beatty was Chairman of the Campaign Executive during the "McGill University Centennial Fund" campaign, when the objective was exceeded by over twenty percent.

With a degree of Bachelor of Arts from University of Toronto, Mr. Beatty proceeded to Osgoode Hall Law School and was called to the bar of Ontario in 1901. During the same year he was appointed to the Law Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, where he subsequently held the positions of assistant Solicitor, General Solicitor, General Counsel, Vice President, Director, Member of the Executive Committee, President, and finally Chairman of the Board of Directors of the world's greatest transportation company.

In 1915 Mr. Beatty received the double distinction of being created a King's Council both for the Province of Ontario and the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. Beatty is also a director of the Bank of Montreal and of the Royal Trust Company, and a Trustee of the Royal Victoria Hospital. In spite of his fifty-three years, Mr. Beatty remains a confirmed bachelor.

Debating Society Plans For Year

Klein And Watt Scheduled For First Meeting

FORESEE INTEREST

Many Topics Intended For Later Meetings—Women's Rights, Socialism, Divorce

Plans formulated at the first meeting of the Debating Union Society executive, were materially advanced when they assembled again at the Union on Tuesday. The society has an extensive program for the coming season, and is anxious to get as early a start as possible.

Arrangements are being made to hold the first debate of the season on October 29. The subject, though not definitely decided upon, will in all probability touch on inter-collegiate sport. Effort is being made to offer noteworthy attractions to the debates. This, insofar as speakers are concerned, is being accomplished by having the two well known debators, A. M. Klein and Alastair Watt down for the evening. Klein is already famous for the liquid thunder of his oratory, while Watt is no less renowned, due to the subtlety of his logic.

Varied Topics

The society's intentions include many meetings, where a varying range of topics will be dealt with. Prominent among the subjects are the question of women's rights, socialism, and divorce. The way has been smoothed for these discussions, by appointing various men, who will be in charge of the meetings. To that end, the debate dealing with women's rights, has been placed in charge of Alchin. Dave Lewis has been given authority over the meeting dealing with socialism, while divorce has been left to Collard.

Personality to be Topic of Lecture

Dr. J. W. Bridges Will Discus on Pschoanalysis

"Personality, Normal and Abnormal" will form the topic of a lecture to be given at the People's Forum in the Church of the Messiah next Sunday evening at 7.30 by Dr. J. W. Bridges, Professor of Abnormal Psychology at McGill.

In the course of this lecture Dr. Bridges will present various important aspects of psychoanalysis. This development of scientific research has aroused intense interest in recent years, and has proved an invaluable aid in revealing the relationship of man to himself. Psychoanalysis found its beginnings in the remarkable studies of Dr. Freud in the realms of the sub-conscious some years ago, and today it is of outstanding importance in the study of mental health.

From his former address at the Forum, it will be remembered that Dr. Bridges reveals the ramifications of the study of Phychoanalysis to be wide and of fascinating human interest. He has also written a book on the subject, entitled, "An Outline of Abnormal Phychology."

The meetings of the People's Forum are open to all who are interested, and are held regularly every Sunday evening. Immediately preceding the lecture, a short organ recital will be given by Mr. George Brewer.

Commerce Freshmen To Treat Sophomores

Preparations are under way for the Annual Freshman-Sophomore Commerce Banquet to be held shortly. Here both freshman and sophomores are given a chance to really meet each other socially and vie with each other as regards to public speaking, and table manners. Owing to the fact that a great many students of the School of Commerce are interested and participate in Athletics, it has not been definitely decided yet as to whether the Banquet will be held before or after the football season is over.

Supper Given Next Week at Krausman's

Third And Fourth Year Electrical Students Invited

An informal supper at Krousman's is planned for Wednesday, Oct. 22 by the McGill electrical Club, who held their first meeting of this session yesterday noon in the Engineering Building. The executive requests that all third and fourth year electrical students will be present. Art Ross was elected secretary-treasurer.

Plans for the coming session were discussed. It was decided that arrangements might be made to attend the Montreal Electrical Club meeting on Nov. 5. Trips to various electrical clubs and power developments were discussed, and necessary arrangements for future visits were left in the hands of the executive.

The present executive consists of C.V. Christie Honorary-President, G. A. Wallace Honorary Vice-President, Hulme President, W. Hines Vice-President, and A. L. Ross Secretary-Treasurer.

Meeting Postponed Due to Accident

The opening meeting of the McGill Choral and Operatic Society scheduled for Thursday, October 16th. at 8:05 P.M. has been unavoidably cancelled owing to an accident sustained by the President Mr. J. S. Allen. The Executive regret very much the unfortunate circumstances which have necessitated this postponement but wishes to state that the programme of the organization will be actively resumed in the near future.

Encouragement to Students' Ability is Value of McGilliad

First Issue Coming On Campus Early in November

SIX ISSUES

Canvassing for Subscriptions Will Start Tomorrow—Financial Independance

"The policy of the McGilliad this year is to carry on a form of literary activity which will encourage writing on the part of students," stated David Lewis, editor-in-chief of the McGilliad, when interviewed yesterday. The McGilliad, two issues of which were put out last year under the editorship of A. M. Klein will make its appearance early in November.

Discussing the subscription campaign which begins tomorrow, Lewis stated that six issues will be put out this year. The first will appear early in November and will continue to do so early each month until April.

Subscriptions

The subscription price will be one dollar for the six issues. The executive expects to sell 1000 subscriptions. The objects of selling these subscriptions is two-fold: First, to give it an independent financial basis so that the cost will not fall wholly on the Arts Undergraduate treasury. Secondly, it will foster literary competition in short story writing, poetry and articles, with the possibility of slight payment for contributions.

Official Support

The authorities look with great favor on the undertaking and have expressed great interest in it. They have signified every intention of supporting the publication.

Allan Edson, President of the Arts Undergraduate Society, stated that the subscriber is assured of getting all six subscriptions and that the publication will always appear on time.

Personnel

The entire personnel of the McGilliad is as follows:—Allan Edson, chairman of the Executive, David Lewis, Arts '31, Editor-in-chief, Gibb Craig, Com. '32 Business Manager. The Editorial Board is composed of the Editor-in-chief, R. Levine, Arts '32, Olive Mary Hill, Arts '31, and Alchin.

The Editor-in-chief urged everybody to see their representatives for subscriptions. These may also be obtained from Bill Gentleman, the members of the Board, the caretakers of the respective buildings or at the Union.

Freshettes Will Be Entertained This Afternoon

THE Annual Freshette Reception will be held this afternoon at four o'clock in the Convocation Hall of the R.V.C. This reception, arranged by the McGill Women's Students Society, is given so that those new to the university may get acquainted with the upperclassmen.

All women students irrespective of the faculties to which they belong are requested to attend. A large number of the Freshettes will be accompanied by the older students, but all newcomers are especially invited, even though they have not received individual invitations.

Mrs. Vaughan, Warden of McGill women, and Ruth Dow, president of the M.W.S.S. will receive. An entertaining programme has been provided by them, at the end of which tea will be served.

Noted Dignitaries To Unveil Statue

Prominent Americans To Make Trip for Presentation

KING REPRESENTED

Lord Willingdon To Exercise Regal Prerogative At McGill

The piece of marble statuary, the gift of several American citizens to McGill, which during the past few days has been placed in position in the hollow, will be formally presented on Nov. 1st Among those taking part in the ceremony, will be the Governor General, Lord Willingdon, the Chancellor, E. W. Beatty, the Principal, Sir Arthur Currie and many notable Americans.

When interviewed yesterday by the Daily Representative, Colonel Bovey made the following statement. "The sponsors of this gift are all prominent American citizens, and each has separately expressed his pleasure at being identified with it. McGill owes more than is generally realized to the sympathy and generosity of her American friends. The numerous gifts of her American well wishers which made possible to a great extent the erection of the Biological Building are only among a few of many such examples.

McGill Royal University

McGill University is a royal corporation and as such His Majesty the King has certain definite perogatives to exercise. On November 1st, Lord Willingdon will, as His Majesty's Representative accept the gift offered and hand it over to the Chancellor and the Principal of the University. The event will be peculiarly signifigant and the importance of the ceremonies will be readily evident to all those interested in McGill.

S.C.A. to Receive Distinguished Guest

Cambridge Lecturer Will Visit University

Plans for the visit of Mr. C. Franklin Angus, Fellow of Trinity Hall Cambridge and University lecturer in classics, are now being made by the Student Christian Association. He is expected for several days at McGill beginning about the middle of next week.

Mr. Angus is giving his complete fall term leave of absence from Cambridge to the S.C.M. of Canada, in order that he may visit the universities and colleges in the interest of the Movement. He attended Elgin House, the annual eastern conference, this year, and since that time has been visiting centres of learning in the Maritimes.

A series of groups and meetings will be planned at which Mr. Angus will deal with some of the essentials of Christianity.

Leaves Today For Ottawa Lceture

Mr. Philip J. Turner, F.R.I.B.A., Special Lecturer in the Department of Architecture is leaving today to lecture before the Architects Club of Ottawa at the Chateau Laurier on "The Old English Inn."

Mr. Turner was in September elected a Fellow of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada.

Amity Among Students Urged at Annual Fall Assembly of Society

Freshman Initiation Again Issue at Meeting—Motion Carried Whereby a Committee Is Appointed to Investigate New Form — New Men Must Be Acquainted With College Spirit.

"There is a need for amity among students to discuss political and international affairs and not only for parliamentarians. The League of Nations Assembly, if it be held at McGill, will serve more than this purpose—it will be a medium for expression," stated A. J. Marshall at the Annual Fall meeting of the Students' Society held yesterday afternoon in the Ball-room of the Union.

Barely a quorum was present, when A. Millard Astwood, President of the Students' Society opened the meeting.

The chief discussion centred around the desirability of the Model Assembly of the League of Nations being held at McGill. Ken Baker, President of the League of Nations Club invited the members to discuss the question before the meeting. He stated that there is at present a committee of two members who are investigating the financial requirements of such an undertaking.

Fears Precedent

Commenting on this subject, J. A. Hutchins stated that the desire for a grant of the League of Nations Club will serve merely as a precedent and will be reverted to in future by other institutions the Campus.

Allan Edson, President of the Arts Undergraduate Society, remarked that the matter of looking after out-of-town members of the Assembly will be attended to by the League of Nations Club and will, as a result, ease the work of the Scarlet Key Society.

Sees Value

"Some means can easily be devised whereby fraternities or private individuals will put up the members from other cities, said Bernard A. Alexandor. "The Model Assembly of the League of Nations cannot be call an experiment. There are numerous institutions in McGill that bring in no money, but at the same time there are many that do, and these about balance each other. Students' money will not be wasted if the Assembly be held at McGill."

Fred Stone, last year's exchange student to the University of British Columbia was asked by the chairman to comment on the exchange system. "Exchange students," remarked Stone "are given an opportunity of seeing Canada and Canadian Universities. Any student who thinks of being an exchange student should find out how activities take place in his own University. Other Canadian Universities are exceptionally curious as to how student activities are carried out at McGill."

"Introduction" Sought

Edmund G. Collard then made a plea for some form of initiation or "introduction" of freshmen to McGill. The newcomer who enters McGill should feel he has some responsibility to bear the traditions and good name of the University. Just now there is no initiation, except perhaps that of fraternities and the Pep Rally.

"While initiation in the form of hazing has died and it is good that it has done so, there should be something else to take its place." Collard then put forward a motion by means of which a committee of three men be appointed by the Students' Society to formulate some plan whereby a new form of initiation be put into force, and to report its investigations at the next meeting of the Society. "There must be something to take its place, something with the modern spirit."

The chairman then brought up the question of locations for voting. In the past voting took place in the Union, but there is no by-law in the Constitution providing for that. No action was taken with regard to this matter.

"Daily" to be Published On Sports Day

The "Daily" will be published as usual tomorrow, in spite of the fact that all lectures have been cancelled. Copies of this issue will be available at the Tuck Shop, and will be distributed at the Stadium.

Porteous Chosen Workshop Head

Succeeds Maycock as Chairman of Committee

A forced meeting was held by the Player's Club yesterday afternoon at five o'clock in their room in the basement of the McGill Union. This was necessitated by the resignation of Bill Maycock from the office of chairman of the workshop committee, and by the need of a new man to fill the vacancy.

After formally receiving Maycock's, the club immediately proceeded to the election of the new chairman. Bud Uorteous, a former director, and keen worker in the club, was unanimously chosen for the position. In thanking the members, Porteous outlined his intentions for the year.

Plays Announced

The club was informed that the newly elected chairman of the workshop committee will put on three plays. These will take place on November 10, Thanksgiving Day, and will be presented in the Moyse Hall. The hall has been made possible by the magnanimity of Dean Ira Mackay, thus removing a great handicap to the producers of the one act plays. The committee is at present discussing various likely plays, but has come, as yet, to no definite conclusion. The names will be announced as soon as a decision will be reached, so that production will be able to go ahead at full swing.

Casting for the one act plays is to go ahead immediately. Notice has been given to the prospective actors and actresses to come for a tryout on Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Lectures have been cancelled on Friday, this being Sports Day, and, as a result a large attendance is expected. The probability of getting a part is quite large, since about thirty actors will be needed. The committee sees a need for sixteen women, and fourteen men, and would be actors are advised not to lose this opportunity.

Need For Actors

The production of "The Ivory Door" being uppermost in the minds of the members, casting for it was continued under the direction of Mr. Cecil West. This was quite successful, but does not offer any definite results as yet.

Mr. West will continue choosing actors for the big play on Tuesday at 7 p.m. instead of Monday as previously announctd. The following are urged to attend:— the misses Noad, Nobbs, Perrigard, Hawes, Blanchard, Lythe, Meagher, Hingston, and Margaret MacKay, and the messrs. Bot, Dodd, Rutherford, Nixon, Leclair, Minion, Ignatieff, Draper, Weiner, Hankin, Boronow, Graham, and any other male aspirants.

Student Government

MOST students take McGill too calmly. They know that many organizations exist and function in the college but they never take the trouble to find out what makes things go and what keeps them going. One would think that they would at least know how they are governed but it seems that in many cases even this knowledge is lacking. This point was admirably illustrated at the Meeting of the Students' Society in the Union yesterday when last year's exchange student from McGill, who was and still is a prominent member of the student body, admitted that he was ignorant as far as some of the points of student government at McGill were concerned.

Most students can get along without knowing very much about the Students' Society, the Undergraduate Societies, and their powers, terms of office and other such details. They are not usually questioned on such matters and if they are a few judicious words about closed ballots, representation of students, and other general facts will suffice to satisfy the curious one.

With exchange students, however, the matter is different. To the students of another university the exchange student is a man who represents the college he comes from and as such knows all about this college and its institutions. They are not the merely curious but are earnest seekers after knowledge and often bring up many of the questions they ask in order to compare their government with that of others and so possibly to improve their own.

General information on the way in which students are governed is given in the Handbook issued to students by the Council every year. This information, however, merely touches the surface and leaves unanswered many, many details which most students would like to know and which some actually must know. Any student can, of course, find out as much about the form of government in force at McGill as he wants to but usually he must seek out this information. If the Council were to offer it to the student either by enlarging the Handbook or by means of a separate pamphlet it would be a step in the right direction.

Not only would it teach students a few of the things they should know but it might also arouse sufficient interest to make a quorum at Students' Society meetings amount to a mere fraction of the number present. It might also entice the freshmen to come out to these meetings—which was certainly not the case yesterday. Obviously more freshmen would turn out if they knew what it was about.

And lastly this much needed information would speed up the business of the Students' Society and prevent much useless work. If everyone knew the constitution or had easy access to it there would be no unnecessary motions and other motions would be announced a reasonable time before the meeting so that they could be voted on instead of postponed till the following Spring.

Open Minds

WE were speaking to a student the other day who is an ardent believer in the evolution theory. With spirited enthusiasm he tried to explain the reasons for his belief and probably succeeded to his own satisfaction. But the remarkable thing about it is that this same student was decrying the evolution theory less than a year ago just after he had read an anti-evolutionary book.

Now it is quite possible that with the passage of time the opinions of the student may have changed as he gradually acquired more and more knowledge on the subject. This is quite possible but the probability is that the student falls into a great class—made up to a great extent of undergraduates—which members of which are convinced of the truth of everything they read. So long as a set of arguments appears to be logical it is believed by this type of student although one may expect him to believe exactly the opposite thing after the passage of a few weeks, when he reads an equally logical set of arguments upholding the other side of the question.

This type of student would flatly deny that he believes everything he reads. His actions may be attributed to an attempt to be broad-minded. Thus in an effort to give everything full justice and avoid a narrow crabbed outlook he goes to the other extreme and believes all seemingly logical arguments forgetting, meanwhile, to compare one argument with another. To possess an open mind is a very laudable ambition but when it leads to such apparent stupidity as outlined above one thinks that perhaps a narrow prejudiced opinion may sometimes be better to start off with. After all this latter gives the student something to compare his readings with and he may notify his opinions as he thinks over what he reads but the open mind is often very likely to lead him to believe what he reads in its entirety.

The BOOK SHELF

TUNES OLD AND NEW FEATURE BOOK BY HUMBERT WOLFE

"THE UNCELESTIAL CITY" by HUMBERT WOLFE. 262 pages. Victor Gollancz Ltd., London.

(K. N. Cameron)

Humbert Wolfe has written some of the most beautiful lyrics in English, but, like so many lyric poets, he has a tendency to monotony. Poets of this class play only one instrument. At first they enchant but in time they bore, and it is then the critic's function to select from their volumes the half dozen or so lyrics which are immortal. No lyrist, not even the master Swinburne, can hope for more; but to have written half a dozen perfect individual lyrics is enough for one lifetime.

As I have not "Requiem," "Humoresque," or "The Gold Rose" before me at the moment I shall not atempt such a selection, but shall confine myself to a consideration of the present volume. Is there anything here worth including? There is nothing which has not been done by Wolfe before, but is it done better now or was it done better before? That, most certainly, is the question.

Wolfe, in this volume, has made an initial mistake in attempting to string his lyrics together by means of a plot with a philosophical implication and, as he lacks a narrative sense, they don't string. The book is a series of unassociated and extremely beautiful poems and as such it must be judged.

After a careful perusal I have selected the sonnet "Trojan Women" as the poem which is most likely to be included with Wolfe's other little masterpieces in anthologies of the future. It is more individual than the others and lacks those obvious mannerisms which were at first so delightful but whose charm has faded with over-repetition. Generally the finest poems in the book are the Fiddler's Songs, but it seems to me that Wolfe has surpassed them in his previous volumes. The lyric containg

Sing no more of Arden
Jaques or Rosalind
There is a garden
You will never find.

is an exquisite little thing but inferior to this from "Humoresque" in the same strain:

I shall make a small statue
Of a boy today
Who will half look at you
And half away.

So too none of the couplet love poems here are equal to

Love's a ghost and no one knows
Whence he comes nor where he goes,
And the hearts that he has haunted
Could not tell you if they wanted.

The same criticism applies to most of the poems in the volume.

It is doubtful whether or not "Trojan Women" is the finest poem in the book (I should place a few ofthe Fiddler's Songs before it) but it is certainly the best sonnet Wolfe has written, and it contains fewer echoes than any of the other pieces.

So let the tears resume to tell us how
There is nothing left of any word she spoke
But blossom scattered with the breaking bough,
The cadence broken when he own heart broke.
Nor read of fabulous women loved and fair
In Troy or Babylon, whose sorrow lingers
Upon the bright and adventitious air
Of beauty not their own, but their gold singer's.
Nor read of how, when daylight came and waking,
There were no birds, no flowers in their breast,
Nor gentle dawn, but only midnight breaking
For ever in the dark remembered West.
Look on her broken hands, her eyes, her brow.
You need not read of Trojan women now.

TARKINGTON AND THE MAINE COAST

(H. B.)

"MIRTHFUL HAVEN," by BOOTH TARKINGTON; Doubleday, Doran and Company. 378 pp. $2.00.

In this his latest novel, Mr. Tarkington preoccupies himself primarily with the sordid unkindliness of social distinctions. Democratic as our attitude may be, we cannot deny that those distinctions, so forcibly brought out in Mirthful Haven, do actually exist.

Through the artistry of the author we gradually become accustomed to look at life as he does, and we see stretching before us a splendid though exaggerated vista of the manners and foibles of our age.

The story in itself is a very ordinary one. The heroine, Edna Pelter, is the subject of some amorous adventures with a wealthy summer vacationist. He knows her from before under the assumed name of Edna Stillpool. She is then faced with the pathetic problem of reconciling the world of the "native" with that of the "summer vacationist." Structurally, the novel is superb, excepting in the closing pages where Mr. Tarkington, plunges Edna Pelter, somewhat disappointingly to the reader, into a rather lethargic marriage.

One must add a word of praise for the consistency with which the author delineates the setting of the novel. The Maine coast, in all its bleakness and the omni-pervading atmosphere of the ocean, is thrown vividly on the screen of our consciousness.

SIR PHILIP GIBBS SURVEYS SOCIETY

(N. A. L.)

THE WINGS OF ADVENTURE, and other little novels by PHILIP GIBBS. Doubleday, Doran and Company, New York, 331 pp., $1.00.

Twelve years after the Armistice, Mr. Philip Gibbs still sees in that catastrophe, not one black spot in the history of civilization, but millions of little tragedies enacted in the lives of the men and women who were caught in that tempest of fury; which, upsetting convention, let loose into society a generation of youngsters who insisted that they had more experience of the furies of life than their elders, and to whom nothing but their own desires could dictate.

Convention stands for moral discipline. But, insists this generation, convention should not have sent us into hell, and expect us to come out with the accepted traditions of Victorian England.

So, Mr. Gibbs shows us, not the zealous patriot in the English officer, but the self-exiled winner of the D.S.O. who could say: "They seem to be preparing for the next little scrap, well, they won't get me again." And he does not show us a foolhardy Tommy, who wants to give his all for King and country, but the man who lingers as prisoner so that he may enjoy a few days of love with friends.

It is impossible to return from the field of campaign, and settle down into a life of calm. Too many things are left in those fields of gore. If it is not life, it is the senses, if not the senses, it is moral standards. How plainly, and yet how heart-touching, does he portray the young officer, who returns home after the conflict, and is ready to make the love of his English bride his own when he receives word that over there, on the outskirts of what had been No Man's Land, there was a French peasant girl, who was waiting for him to come back and give a name to her issue. Not that the matter could be proven, but his sense of honour demands that he sacrifice his soul now, oven as he had offered his life before.

In these ten novels, Gibbs displays his versatility of style and imagery. Newspaperman that he is, he knows how to translate the sensations of the eye to the pen, and then with the science of a psychologist, he analyses all the movements and desires of his characters. Nothing unexpected turns up to put a sudden ending to any of the stories, the tragedy in each one is obvious from the beginning, and emanates from the character of the individual. For the most part, he skillfully blends the concrete imagery, with the somewhat paradoxical analyses of the mind.

THE MYSTERY IS FINALLY SOLVED

(J. G. M.)

"THE RAVEN'S FEATHERS" by DOUGLAS CAREY. The Graphic Publishers Ltd. Ottawa. 322 pp. $2.00.

Mr. Carey has written us a mystery story which would make a suitable Christmas gift for those of our friends who suffer from heart disease or nervous prostration. His mystery is mysterious enough, but not very vividly expressed.

The chief flaw in his style is that he leaves nothing for the reader to do. He has not mastered the art of suggesting a story rather than describing it. He is not satisfied with recording quotations, punctuated with suitable question marks and exclamation points, but must also tell exactly how the characters felt at the time. One could never lose himself in the story, for Mr. Carey makes the position of the "gentle reader" too conscious.

The narrative is concerned with an old, respectable English family which suffers all sorts of misfortune at the hands of a witch, who takes twenty-seven chapters to kill four people, and misses killing one, by means of spells, a very intelligent raven, poisonous orchids and spiders. The story really begins to get interesting at the end, but the author interjects so many descriptive paragraphs where action paragraphs are required, that the reader is cooled off by the time the intense scenes arrive.

Mr. Carey has put considerable work on this book, judging by his resourcefulness in finding out of the way elements to make up the plot. If his style was simpler and more direct, and he did not solve so simply what is supposed to be a very difficult mystery, "The Raven's Feathers" would make better reading.

DILUTED LOVE

(M. Naismith)

"MONIQUE," by YVONNE DUFOUR. E. P. Dutton & Co. 249 pp.

Mademoiselle Dufour is a Frenchwoman writing in English and is therefore under somewhat of a handicap. The English, however, is flawless, and some of the descriptions are well done in a toneless and unemotional way.

Theme and characterisation rather than language are responsible for the utter dullness of the novel. The plot, if we may call it plot, is unconvincing and, moreover, hackneyed. Monique is a beautiful French young lady living with her mother in dowdy seclusion on their imperished estate. Due to convenient tire trouble Kent Ralston, a cultivated New York business man, comes into her life and stays there. They are married and go to New York to live. Life there offers no complications until Adrian, Kent's cousin appears. He is a musician, charming, selfish, and spoiled by women. Adrian makes rather diluted love to Monique and is seen by Kent who immediately suggests a flight in his aeroplane. Now comes the only surprise in the book, for instead of dropping Adrian out or wrecking the plane the worthy Kent merely performs a few stunts and lands. For some inexplicable reason this exploit proves to Monique that Kent is stronger than circumstances and her love for him intensifies. And so presumably they lived happily ever after.

The characters, with the exception of Monique, pass from sight, are dealt with so lightly that they never appear vital. Rather do they resemble people walking in the street in whose affairs one may feel some momentary interest, which wanes as they

Five Universities Compete Here For Intercollegiate Tennis Title

Campus Courts Scene Today of Unusual Tourney

Many Invading Stars Here To Lift Tennis Crown

McGILL TITLEHOLDERS

Draw Made This Morning—Leslie Leads Redmen

The weatherman permitting McGill students will have an opportunity today of seeing the best tennis played on the campus courts in years, as representatives from Toronto, R.M.C., Queens', University of Montreal, and possibly Osgoode Hall, Endeavour to wrest the intercollegiate title from Charlie Leslie, and his red racquet swingers. The three day test, which comes to a conclusion on Saturday morning when the finals of the singles and doubles will be played off, gets under way this morning at ten o'clock, when the draw will be made.

Sheppard with Queens'

Entries have been received from all the competing colleges at the time of writing except Osgoode Hall, and at an early hour last evening, no word from Walter Martin and his cohorts had been heard. Queens' have entered four men, whom they consider comprise the strongest tri-color team in years. Sheppard, who played well in the Ontario tournament at Hamilton last summer, and at the Canadian championships in Toronto a week later, where paired with a visitor from Southern California, he very nearly put out the men's doubles champions of the Dominion, Rennie and Procter, will lead the Queens' outfit. Muir, Butler, and Cathcart, who will be the other members of the team, are names well known in tennis circles.

Varsity Always Strong

Varsity have sent six men to carry the colors of the blue and white. Having lost the services of Martin and Holmes, this year the Queens' City team will be a "dark horse", but from experience of Varsity tennis teams in the past, they will be a serious threat with which to contend.

U. of M. Confident

Hurtubise and Paradis are two outstanding names on the University of Montreal line-up, both being well known in Canadian tennis tournaments. While the former has made a name for himself on Montreal courts, Paradis hails from Ottawa, where he plays at the Rideau Tennis Club. He won the Eastern Canadian Junior singles title a few years ago, and has been most active in the game ever since. The other four members of the squad are Bumbray, Bonner, Valas, and Desmarais. U. of M. students are confident that their team will cop the honors this year.

Cadets Send Four

R.M.C. have sent four men to play in the tourney, McArthy, Robertson, Wattsford, and Mavin. This quartet have been hard at work on the cadet courts for some time, practicing for this annual epic in intercollegiate tennis, and promise to make things hum there for the next three days.

McMartin Makes Place

The McGill team, announced yesterday, stands, with the exception that McMartin will play on doubles team number two with Crain. The former was slated to run through an elimination match with Chipman yesterday morning to decide the position but the game was rained out. McMartin's superior net game won him the position, for Chipman is essentially an exponent of back line drives.

With Leslie and Wilson playing the singles, and as one doubles team, while Crain and Farmer handle the number three and four singles assignments respectively, student supporters are assured of a strong defense of the hard won laurels.

Stands Will Help

The matches today will probably go until the light gives out, and the same will be the case Friday. It is planned to have the finals on Saturday morning, to finish before the football game against Queens', and for these matches the athletic board have arranged to build seating accomodation around the feature courts.

Event Arouses Interest

As the event only occurs in one college once in several years, a great deal of interest is being taken, all over the city. It is a great opportunity to see some really fine tennis—one of sport's cleanest and fastest games.

Law Gridmen to Meet Arts Today

Legal Lions Make Football Debuts at Full Strength

Law's fast-travelling football squad will be seen in action for the first time today when the legal lions stack up against Arts this afternoon on the Campus. Not since the days when the Senior Bar Exams were a sinch have the lawyers produced so smooth-working a squad. Secret practices and diligent training table have been the order for the lawyers during the last few weeks and reports emanating from their camp state a hitherto unknown law grinding machine will make its football debut this afternoon.

Arts, having suffered a defeat at the hands of Commerce, will probably meet stiff opposition in the lawyers, but the former are confident. It was officially confirmed at a late hour last night that a great deal of the fortunes have been invested in today's match, since all members of the squad will attend the Informal tomorrow evening. It is also predicted that the lawyers will come through, since in former years it was the practice of all law players to attempt amendments to the playing rules during the encounter.

WRESTLING

Wrestling practices are being held regularly on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 5 o'clock in the Montreal High School Gymnasium. All men who have already turned out, should make it a point to be present at every practice to get into good physical condition, as competitive meets will commence in about three or four weeks. Any newcomers interested in wrestling should present themselves immediately to Coach Smith in the M.H.S. Gym on the above days.

Doctors Display Good Football To Down Science

Meds Capture Second Successive Win, 8 to 0

TARBOX OUTSTANDING

Playing its second league game in two days, the Medical rugby machine took its second victory in the same time, when it scored a well-earned but fairly close win over the Science squad by an 8 to 0 score on the Lower Campus yesterday. Nearly a dozen completed and uncompleted forward passes featured the contest, and most of them were thrown by Medicine.

No statistical data was compiled, but it is safe to guess that most of the Medicine players have an American tradition as far as football is concerned; certainly the general policy of the team reflects this. Their skill in handling forward passes, their readiness to use the play, their disdain for socks, all these points testify to their antecedents.

Teams Well-Drilled

Interfaculty games are often funny and even pitiful because of the manifest lack of practice by the teams, but both contestants in yesterday's struggle showed the benefits of signal practice if not of an intensive conditioning grind. The Med quarter, Creighton, gave his plays in conference, but they were nearly always executed with precision and in most cases were well masked. Thomson called signals to the Science squad, which they seemed to understand. Fumbles were not unknown, but in many cases were recovered.

In the first period of yesterday's game, although Medicine really forced the play aided by two pretty completed forward passes which brought gains of 25 to 40 yards there was no scoring.

Meds got the inevitable single point in the second period, when Creighton kicked to the deadline. This play followed some pretty combination in running back kicks by Tarbox and Stevens, which in spite of more fumbles gradually advanced the play into Science territory.

Tarbox Plunges For Touch

Medicine kicked off in the second half, and a Science fumble gave them the ball on the plumber 30-yard line. Montana Tarbox plunged for yards three times in succession, but the last play was called for offside. Phoenix Creighton tried a drop, but it was blocked. Soon Meds got the oval again, and their hefty quarter kicked to rouge O'Dowd. With play at centre field, Meds completed another long forward to advance to Science 5—yard line. A moment later Tarbox plunged over for five points. The try was converted to complete the scoring for the game at 8 to 0.

There will be an informal get-together of all McGill hockey players and any newcomers this evening in the Union Music Room at 7.45. Coach Bobby Bell and Captain George McTeer will be on deck to welcome the boys back as well as to comment on this year's campaign.

There will be no fencing on Sports Day, Friday, Oct. 17th. Members of the McGill Fencing Club are asked to report next Monday afternoon at 5.00 p.m. to secure their lockers & equipment for the season. Coach Raimondi will be on hand to give the beginners a lesson.

Bill Lovering Takes Over Kicking Assignment

TRI-COLOR SATURDAY

Capacity Crowd Expected to See Queens' Team Meet McGill

There has been no let down in the practicing of McGill's football squad this week, in preparation for the struggle with Queen's here on Saturday. Rather, with "Shag" Shaughnessy on hand to help Major Forbes brush up on the rough spots, the team's daily dozen has become more and more intense, and the redmen are ready to battle the best in the game. The return of Lovering to the squad has aided the kicking department considerably, and the hurdling half back was hoisting his best efforts of the season, yesterday afternoon with a wet ball.

Young and Chapman also returned to practice, in the best of shape, and feeling no ill effects from the Toronto tussle last week-end. Roger Wilson, who bids fair to become the most accomplished linesman in the intercollegiate this season, is the only casualty, and is being kept under the blankets. The British Columbian heavyweight was in uniform at yesterday's practice, but was ordered to take it easy.

Even the team itself are most appreciative of the recent improvements effected. Better clipping and interferance are certain on Saturday, and the tri-color may expect an old time battle from start to finish. Every effort will be made to smash the Queen's line to hurry Carter's kicks, and if that plan of attack proves successful the redmen expect to take the long end of the score. The confidence and determination evident at the field house bode well for a big afternoon for James McGill.

All reports indicate that the tri-color are every bit as capable this season as they have been for the last eight years. Behind the expert booting of Carter, and the plunging attacks of the middle wings, Queen's have all the old fight, and condition that has been their heritage since the days of "Pep" Bud Thomas, and Batstone, who now handles the reins in most efficient style.

For the first time this year Molson Stadium will be packed with roaring howling rooters for the red and white, with the usual band of Queen's supporters, some of whom cover the long trek to Montreal on foot, making things merry in their rooting section. Every forecast points to what may prove to be the outstanding battle of the intercollegiate season, and a win for McGill will complicate the standing right at the start. Western expect to win from Toronto, figuring that their line will smother the blue and white heavies, while Sinclair is being credited with having an unusual day against McGill last Saturday. In any event, if the weatherman is kind, the S.R.O. signs will be handy for the two intercollegiate games this Saturday.

Golfers Play For Harrington Trophy

Given by Dr. F. Johnson For Profs-Students Play

POPULAR PROFESSOR

Dr. B. J. Harrington, Former Chemistry Head, Was Well-Liked by Students

In honor of the man whom Professor N.N. Evans characterises as probably the best-loved professor ever in McGill, the late Dr. Bernard J. Harrington, a fine trophy has been presented for competition in the annual professors and student golf match. The donation, in the form of the figure of a swinging golfer on a large base, is the gift of Dr. F.M.G. Johnson, presently Director of the Department of Chemistry. It will be held each year in the name of either the professors or the students collectively, according to the winner of the match.

Dr. Harrington was the Director, and for many years the only lecturer of the Department of Chemistry here previous to his death in 1906. He was succeeded by the late Dr. R. F. Ruttan who was always highly interested in golf, having been a charter member of the Royal Montreal Club, the oldest in America, and he was always behind the professors and students matches with encouragement and participation.

However, there is already a Ruttan golf trophy, offered in the intercollegiate competition by Dr. Ruttan himself. So Dr. Johnson has paid tribute to Dr. Ruttan's predecessor, in the present donation.

Was Alone in Chemistry Department

Dr. Harrington was for many years both before and after the chemistry department moved into the present building in 1898, the head and for most of the time the only lecturer. He gave all the lectures in chemistry, metallurgy, mining, mineralogy, and petrography. He married the eldest daughter of Sir William Dawson, Principal of the University at the time, and for a while during one of Sir William's absences, he added to his already onerous classes, those in geology.

A piano player and singer of some talent, Dr. Harrington was associated with old Glee Club, which he often led. In fact he was highly successful in making personal friends amongst the students. In this connection one notes that one of the outstanding advantages of the annual golf match is that it is probably the only event which yearly gives the professors of all faculties and the students of all faculties an opportunity to meet one another in sport and in a social way.

Dr. Harrington's portrait hangs in the Redpath Museum.

This year's competition for the Harrington Trophy takes place tomorrow morning at the Royal Montreal Golf Club, Dixie. It being College Sports Day, lectures in all faculties, are cancelled. Matches have already been published, and as has already been announced each professor will entertain his student opponent at lunch at the club. Many of the foursomes will play additional informal rounds in the afternoon, while others will return to town to watch Field Day at the Stadium.

The story of this annual match has not been the same in the last few years as it used to be. Not very long ago the professors used to wollop the students unmercifully, and everybody said that golf was an old man's game. Now the students always make a good showing, as more of them are playing and playing well. The Principal is always an active participant in this event and this year he is paired with Doug McIntyre.

Scoring this year will be a little different from former years, the best ball and aggregate being used to determine the winners of a foursome. It has been suggested that the name of the student with the low gross will be engraved on the ample base of the Harrington Trophy, as well as the team winners of the competition.

Several Records Expected to Fall

Interfaculty Track Meet Takes Place Tomorrow

COMPETITION KEEN

With the Interfaculty track meet only two days off most of the entries are finishing off training for an annual event which determines the personnel of the senior and Intermediate track teams.

New Records Expected

With the majority of last year's teams back again backed by a few promising freshmen, officials of the meet are looking forward to many new records. Amongst the records expected to be tied if not broken are the 880 and one mile in the running events and the discus throw, the shot put, the javelin throw the high jump in the field events. Both hurdle events will see the running of two of the greatest hurdlers in the Dominion namely Charley Drew and Howie Baker.

Drew Outstanding

The outstanding entry of the meet and upon whom McGill's chances for winning the Intercollegiate championship depend a great deal is Charley Drew who was elected captain of the team for this year. Besides being entered in the high hurdles, his favorite event, he is also billed to run in the 100 yard dash and to appear in the high jump, broad jump and discus throw. An injured wrist is preventing his entry in the shot put an event in which he gained the Intercollegiate title two years ago. He is without doubt one of the greatest track athletes in the history of McGill. Drew is expected to receive some great competition in the high hurdles when he will be opposed by Howie Baker, who represented Canada in the British Empire games at Hamilton last summer. Baker is at present at top form and the old record is almost sure to fall by the wayside.

The Intercollegiate champions in the discus, javelin, and pole vault, Costello, Cummings and Wallace respectively are again competing this year. Cummings, it will be remembered broke the javelin throw record last year. The high jump and broad jump were won by Drew.

The mile and three mile are other events in which competition will be keen. With Balmer, Calhoun and Jacobs out to make the first team one of the greatest races in this event in the past few years is anticipated. In the mile Lochead and Barclay, members of last year's team are entered. A freshman, Swartz is expected to give both these men a good run.

All who intend to enter and have not signed yet are asked to sign the entry list in the Field-house at the Stadium as soon as possible.

McGill Seconds Lose to Bishops

Drizzling Rain And Wet Field Marred Play

McGILLIVREY STARS

Red Intermediates Barely Nosed Out By 4 to 2 Score

A wet soggy field, a deluge of rain, and completely deserted bleachers provided the background for last night's intermediate intercollegiate night football tilt when the McGill seconds succumbed to Bishop's College by the score of 4 to 2.

Playing much better football than they did last Saturday against Loyola, the McGill squad managed to hold the purple and white during the most part of the encounter and sometimes showed flashes of real football. For the major part, the game was replete with blocked kicks and far from brilliant handling of the rain-drenched oval. Bell, Talpis, and Greenblatt assumed the kicking duties for the redmen, the latter's exhibition towards the end of the tussle being somewhat remarkable considering the conditions of the field.

For the visitors, Skelton, Kenny and Fuller were the most consistent ground gainers. Both lines held well, but a general tendency for flopping was evident. End run combinations on the part of both backfield divisions also proved spectacular despite the soggyness of the ground.

Bert McGillivray starred on the McGill half line with his broken field running and excellent ball handling. The diminutive half certainly outwitted the heavy Bishop's squad to make big gains.

Bishops four points came from two rouges and one safety touch, while the McGill tallies came via two rouges.

Players' Club

There are at present several copies of "The Ivory Door" by A. A. Milne missing from the club room. Will all those who have been lent these copies return same today so that the casting will not be hampered by their negligence. All copies should be in by 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Will the following please meet Bud Porteous in the club room at 2:30 or as soon after as possible to type the script for the one-act plays. Fannie Slapack, C. F. B. Stevens, Mary Quigley.

The casting for the first three one-act plays will begin at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. There are 16 women's parts and 14 men's. Will the Messrs. Boronow and Furtherer and the Misses Mitchell and Henderson please be present. Will Messrs. R. H. Wright and Gordon Leclaire please be present to assist Mr. Porteous.

It is not probable that the necessary books from New York will arrive before Thursday afternoon, so that all those who want "The Ivory Door" should call at the club room sometime between 4 and 6 o'clock today.

The casting for the one act plays will take place on Friday afternoon, at 2 p.m. in the club room in the basement of the Union. Twenty-nine players in all are needed, sixteen women and thirteen men. The committee expects a large turnout, since Friday is a holiday. Due to the courtesy of Dean Ira Mackay, the plays are to be put on in the Moyse Hall this year. The first lot of three plays will be put on November 10.

At a meeting of the club yesterday, Bud Porteous was elected as the new chairman of the workshop committee. Though a number of plays are being scrutinised, the committee are fairly decided as to what plays are to be put on.

Attention Fencers

With the arrival of the necessary complement of lockers, a full turn-out of fencers is anticipated on Monday. A number of the old boys have not shown up as promptly as might have been expected of them, owing to the inconvenience entailed by lack of locker accomodation. But with fulfilment of this imperative need, there will remain no further excuse for the apathy which members have hitherto evinced.

We should recall the high mark set us by our predecessors of last year. The intercollegiate title so ably won can only be retained in the future by the development of future talent. The amount of interest so far manifested in the sport by Freshmen has not been as wide-spread as the enviable rank of our Club should command. But we look to a more encouraging representation of Freshmen in the immediate future. Capable instruction will be afforded novices by Coach Raimondi, who has developed our premier foilsmen for the past 5 years; and prospective members are advised to avail themselves of his valuable services. With the expected return of all our active men on Monday, practises will begin in earnest. Once more we urge all members to attend and help us to perpetuate the splendid record of last year.
